

Competition is the driving force on making an economy grow and the innovation is what we thrive on in our society to make services, products, the quality of life better. Satellite radio is the next innovative step in the media marketplace. Now instead of traditional broadcasters asking for a handout to stifle comeptition they need to take that energy, time and money to be more innovative for themselves to be able to compete. Newspapers have done it with the arrival of the internet so, traditional radio stations should do the same thing. These big businesses need to stop asking for help everytime they get into trouble either monetarily or competitively. It is time to take a stand and make them accountable for their actions. If they fall then so be it, another company will be right behind to take their place. Leave Satellite radio alone and allow the marketplace decide who shall stay and who shall go. I love my satellite radio and it is a service for which I pay for out of my pocket to have. I love the quality and reduction in interruptions. Vote against limiting the services they povide and allow them to be innovative and succeed or fail on their own.

Concerned citizen, Wally Lumpkin